Cuban heel on the rights of men

Richard Boud on a cameraman with his sights on Castro's indiscretions

The film is an excellent document of a period when the Cuban people were suffering under Castro's regime. It is a film that both educates and informs, but also leaves the viewer with a sense of the human cost of Castro's rule.

The film is a powerful reminder of the need for human rights and the importance of freedom of expression. It is a film that deserves to be seen by as many people as possible, in order to create a better understanding of the world we live in.

The film is also a powerful statement on the power of the media. It shows how the media can be used to expose the truth, and to bring about change.

The film is a must-see for anyone interested in human rights, documentary filmmaking, or the Cuban Revolution.
